Aviation Maintenance Project

The Stevenson Family

Dear AWA Family and Friends,

This year has been one to remember. It's been full of new friends, new experiences, a new church family, new jobs, and new circumstances to grow the talents God bids us to use in His vineyard.

Thank you for cheering us along and being the arms that hold us up so that we both—you and us—have victory in soul winning and witnessing. People are going to be in the kingdom of heaven because of your support of the work we are doing with AWA. You are saving souls along with us as you lift us up. Thank you!

In a way no one expected, your prayers for God to continually lead us were not only being answered daily, but were answered in how God revealed His plan for me, Rebecca. I thought I was going to be put to work in the office doing a little of this and a little of that to help everyone in some way. I didn't know God would lift me to do a lot of this and a lot of that to help everyone although I had no background as an administrative assistant.

Only by God's grace to qualify the called am I able to learn my new role as administrative assistant to Pastor Ric Swaningson, President and CEO of Adventist World Aviation. How did that happen? I keep wondering. God has a plan that is tremendous to say the least.

Flight time with pastor Ric

The positions He has called Kyle and I to allow us to potentially be involved everywhere in AWA's ministry which belongs to God. Kyle will be traveling to each mission base to care for the planes, and as we work on our flight training, we work towards the goal of being relief pilots where needed when field missionaries take furlough, and the ability to ferry or transport aircraft that's been donated or needs to be moved from place to place.

As you've prayed for us and continue supporting, God has lifted Kyle up in his position of Chief of Aircraft Maintenance so that for the first time in his career he is able to fashion the needs and structure of the shop he's working in. He's now able to custom tailor his maintenance skills according to circumstance and need, both in the hangar here and in the field through communication with AWA's foreign field missionaries. With Kyle's skills and service, AWA's maintenance projects, that extend globally, will continue to endure with the highest safety measures and efficiency.

As of September 30th, Kyle acquired his IA—Inspector's Authority—so that he can now go to the field and tend to the aircraft when the yearly annual is due (it's like a "well plane" visit with the "aircraft doctor") and sign off on them as finished. It was a tremendously difficult test, but he passed it, and now has the authority to sign off on aircraft, so AWA's planes can continue to fly safely.

The adventure is only beginning and God is using your prayers and your monthly generosity to see that

His plan unfolds for us in mind-blowing ways. Thank you for being partners in this with us! God bless you all; now, and into the New Year! Merry Christmas everyone!

With Love,
Kyle and Rebecca
