

While the morning was slightly overcast, the clouds were broken and there was golden sun highlighting the thin fog and clouds. This would soon burn off as the sun rose. Pastor Ric and I were ready to embark on our journey; an angel flight for Pastor Ric's neighbor, Kris, and her dad Butch.

Butch and his wife had both battled Covid 19. Sadly Butch's wife passed away from complications with pneumonia. She was Butch's caregiver and without her he would struggle on his own. Butch lived in Savannah, Georgia and would need to move up to Durham, North Carolina with his daughter, Kris. Kris was deeply stressed with how to get him moved. A long drive in the car would be hard for him.

When Pastor Ric learned of this situation he offered to fly Butch here to NC. In great tears of joy, Kris thanked him. Her stress removed; Kris felt peace knowing her father's needs, as well as hers, would be cared for.

That morning before we flew, Kyle went out to check the battery for AWA's flagship, the Toku Hana. A four hour delay ensued as Kyle found a battery box grounding issue. He cleaned up the corrosion causing the problem, got it working, and praise the Lord, we were able to get on our way!

God's provision for all matters is bewildering. Sometimes we're delayed. Sometimes we don't know how we're going to get from point A to point B and have the logistics worked out, but in the end, God works it out and He is glorified.

We picked up Kris first and how excited she was to see us. She didn't know I would be going along as copilot with Pastor Ric. Kris needed the ministry my presence offered as a sister in Christ and she wept on my shoulder. We loaded up and took to the air again. How she thrilled at being in the plane, flying through the clouds, and seeing the wonderful sights!

A couple hours later, we picked up Butch in Savannah, GA. He is a very tall man, and unstable on his feet. It was good he had extra family present to help as it took a little extra effort to get him in the plane. We packed what luggage we could to max flyable weight and with “clear prop!” off we went again.

Butch and Kris loved their flight back. They enjoyed the setting sun and the beauty of the view, especially as we neared the airport in Durham. They were like children at Christmas; gleeful over the bright runway lights! Landing safely we all expressed our thankfulness in answer to our prayers. The journey was accomplished and both Butch and Kris now study with Pastor Ric as their relationship with God grows.

Your donations and prayers make angel flights such as this possible. Please partner with AWA today to keep this blessed program going? THANK YOU!

Until next month!
