

Pictured: The loaded airplane before launch and Red Cross personnel unload in Manley.

Spring Flooding

Those of us who live in the northern climes look forward to the glories of the short, intense, warm, beautiful summers that grace our horizons. After 8 months of cold, snow, and dark we are well ready for a change. But with the change comes the very real threat of river ice jams and subsequent flooding. This particular winter brought more than 30 inches of snow above the yearly average, so the weather-mongers and hydrologists have been forecasting worse than average high water. Most of the approximately 225 native villages are located close to rivers or the Arctic Sea coast.

The first week of May saw the first river ice movement, with Manley Hot Springs the first of probably many small communities needing outside assistance with resources not easily accessible.

Due to our long-standing relationship with ACS (Adventist Community Services) and NARVOAD (Northern Alaska Regional Voluntary Agencies in Disaster) the state of Alaska SEOC (State Emergency Operations Center) called requesting a flight to transport as many Red Cross household cleaning kits to Manley Hot Springs as we could squeeze on board. We were able to take 38 fivegallon buckets.

Volunteer Pilots Jim Keeney and Jim Kincaid cared for the flying duties.

A Refuge

Pou have been a refuge for the poor, a refuge for the needy in their distress, a shelter from the storm and a shade from the heat.

For the breath of the ruthless is like a storm driving against a wall.

-Isaiah 25:4

God bless you all, Jim and Linda Kincaid

