

Winter Activities

Hello friends and family. I pray this report finds you well. The cold weather has arrived. However, we are grateful for a cozy home, warm jackets, and warm friendships. We have been swamped lately with family, church activities, and homeschooling. We are helping our church plan a camping trip for the Pathfinders and Adventurers club. This will be our first winter camping trip. However, our friends from around here are helping us prepare for it, and we are excited about the upcoming event. We've also been helping with planning community events, so people can get to know our God better and come into contact with the truth. I personally enjoy helping plan all these events.

My husband and I plan to host a bread-making class by the end of November. We are thankful that the school in the village on Clark's Point opened its doors and allowed us to conduct a bread class demonstration. This village is 15 minutes away by plane. We plan to not only teach them how to cook with whole wheat flour, but also how to mill their own flour, and how they can obtain more nutrients and benefits, as well as the fiber that many people lack in this area. We're very excited about it, and we continually ask for God's guidance to lead all these plans and projects.

My mom and sister have been here for three weeks now, and they have been very warmly welcomed here, just like we were. They're still getting used to the dark hours and the cold. They came right before the winter weather started! But we are doing everything we can to help them adjust.

One thing that we want to do is have God leading in the work here. We have seen in our own lives that if God isn't leading, then we can't expect good progress. We can have the plane flying, missionaries going everywhere, a pastor in every church, radio stations in every village, and beautiful churches all over. Still, it wouldn't mean much if we weren't being guided daily by God's Spirit. There's plenty of history to look back on in recent years, as well as further back to see that good times don't last if you don't abide in Christ. Israel's history is a prime example. They went from the height of prosperity during Solomon's reign to having the kingdom divided during the next king's reign, and then later taken captive by another nation.

We must always be mindful of the source of our strength and our weakness outside of God's care. We could be busy little bees, but we're doing nothing productive. It is crushing to work hard at something to see later that it was time wasted. I believe that God has big plans for all our lives, and He has plans for Alaska. Please pray that we're in tune with Him and that we fully live out His plans for us.

May the Lord bless you and watch over you, as well as your loved ones. We are grateful to all our loyal supporters. We can definitely feel the prayers you all have for us. God is so good, and we are so thankful for His blessings!

Love,
The Fixes
